

Congress of the United States

Washington, DC 20515

July 1, 2005

The Honorable George W. Bush
President of the United States of America
1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
Washington, DC 20500

Dear Mr. President:

The death of PLO Chairman Arafat, the emergence of a new Palestinian leadership and the government of Israel's disengagement plan have created dramatic new openings in the Middle East. What happens over the next few months will determine whether those openings will in fact bring long-lasting changes to this troubled region. The key in many ways is the successful implementation of Israel's disengagement from Gaza and four settlements in the West Bank, which is crucial to the resumption of the Road Map and to any reinvigoration of the peace process.

By the end of this summer, Israel – at great political, financial and emotional cost - will withdraw its military and civilian presence from the Gaza Strip and four settlements in the West Bank. This presents a real opportunity for the Palestinian leadership to prove to the world and, more importantly, its own people, that it is capable of governing. If the Palestinian Authority is unable to establish governance in Gaza after Israel's departure and allows it to be used as a launching pad for terror or rocket attacks against Israel, it is very hard to see how future steps toward peace will be possible. There is now only a short window to take the steps necessary to make that withdrawal a success.

First, the newly elected Palestinian leadership must be urged to work with Israel to coordinate the details of the withdrawal. Clearly, the more coordination there is, the greater the chances of success.

Second, and most importantly, President Abbas must act decisively to assert his control over the disparate, armed groups in Gaza and the West Bank. While the Palestinian president should be commended for beginning to change the tone of Palestinian political discourse and for making some important moves in lessening incitement and in negotiating a period of calm, these actions, and the promise they hold, are now at risk. HAMAS, Islamic Jihad, and the other terror groups are using the "calm" negotiated by Abbas to re-arm and re-organize. Failure to establish the rule of law and confiscate weapons from the very groups who wish to see the peace process end will only doom his own prospects and set back the cause of peace and the betterment of his own people.

The United States must also be actively engaged to assure that other countries with critical roles to play in the success of the Gaza disengagement do their part. In all meetings with Arab states and European leaders, we must encourage them to actively support disengagement, Palestinian security, economic and political reform and, most importantly, a large part of the substantial financial assistance the Palestinians will need to improve the economic prospects for Gazans following Israel's withdrawal.

Egypt, in particular, has a special security interest in ensuring that Gaza does not become a haven for terrorism. Egypt should continue and expand its efforts to stop the increased arms smuggling taking place across the Egyptian/Gaza border and to provide Abbas the political support and encouragement he needs to dismantle the terrorist infrastructure.

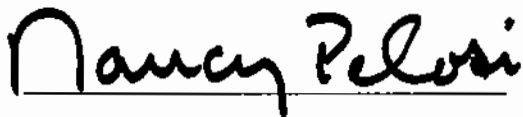

We understand how difficult this process is. We also understand the desire by some to rush to deal with final status issues soon after disengagement. We urge you to resist that pressure. Ultimately, the peace process will only succeed if the disengagement works well, if the Palestinians take real steps to end terror and institute real reform, and the parties then proceed to the next steps in the roadmap.

This process will take time and patience, but it is the only way to build the confidence and the reforms necessary to move forward. We appreciate the leadership you have demonstrated so far and stand ready to work together with you in these important efforts.

Sincerely,

Robert Menendez
